

From: Bugcrowd Support support@bugcrowd.com
Subject: Concerning Your Recent Submission - Copy
Date: September 2, 2021 at 6:13 PM
To: bennygoodman000@gmail.com

bugcrowd

Hello cleanc0de,

We have recently received reports of your behavior in the wake of your removal from HackerOne and were troubled to see that you have intentionally leaked PII and other sensitive data publicly.

This behavior is in direct violation of the Bugcrowd Code of Conduct, which states under the What We Require section the following:

- Be Kind.
- Be Respectful and Professional in your communications and behavior.
- Be Helpful and help us all improve ourselves. We do this through honest and insightful discussion with our peers and partners.
- Be prompt in reporting vulnerabilities you have identified.
- Be Ethical. Don't intentionally mislead customers or Bugcrowd. It is your job to try and break both technology and business logic flaws, but when you find a weakness it is also your job to report it to be fixed – not exploit it.

Additionally, the Code of Conduct applies to all Bugcrowd community members:

*The Bugcrowd Code of Conduct outlines the behavior required of all Bugcrowd community members participating in crowdsourced security programs...

The action you took was not kind, ethical, respectful, or professional. While this did not happen on our platform directly, this behavior affects the entire bug bounty community and we do take the safety of the wider community very seriously. As such, we are immediately and permanently banning your Researcher account on our platform.

permanently banning your researcher account on our platform.

If you have any questions, please let us know and we wish you luck with your future endeavors.

Sincerely,
The Bugcrowd Support Team

Unsubscribe from our emails

Powered by Intercom